Program Notes

The instruments of the Gamelan were brought to the United States from Indonesia in 1959 by the Tripp family after a two-year stay, during which time they learned the music. The instruments are tuned on a pentatonic (five-note) scale rather than the seven-note scale to which we are accustomed. Each instrument, dependent on the others, blends into a harmonious total with one instrument taking the lead for melody, another for rhythm, and another for tempo. In Indonesia the music is not written; it is known in the minds of the people. For easy learning, however, it has been transposed into numbers. The players are all members of the band.
